

Special Dispatch to The N. Y. Tribune.
PORT ERIC, via BUFFALO, June 3, 1869—3 p. m.

The Fenian raid at this point is at its height. And, having secured a strong force of regular and volunteer soldiers to man this point, throwing out a force of skirmish lines to encircle the Fenian army, the Fenians are now in a very bad way. Here a heavy bag of Fenians was expected to be made, but on the lines getting up to the site of the fort, no enemy was to be seen. At 11 o'clock last night, 700 Fenians got into a large scow and tried to cross the river to Buffalo; but the scow was brought to by the gunboat Michigan, and to-day lies by the shore.

The Fenians were ferried across to the American side by 400 men and our cavalry, who the whole day have been in the charge of Gen. O'Neill. Four Fenians were wounded in the crossing. The enemy, up to 5 a. m., was not aware of our presence, and our cavalry, who were in the position of communicating with the Fenians, have issued an order prohibiting communication with the Fenians, and the order of Gen. Grant.

The revenue cutter Fossenden arrived at 7 o'clock last night, and is now doing picket duty at the mouth of the river.

Fifteen large boats, marked "P. O. Day," arrived last night per American express. A Fenian guard is now placed over them in the depot.

It is confidently expected that another raid is contemplated.

following: BUFFALO, Saturday, June 2, 1866.
To D. M. Chapin, Collector, Ogdensburg:
 Put as heavy guns on the revenue cutter as she will bear, and arm any other boat in port with cannon from the arsenal.

A squadron, composed of militia and cavalry ordered out in this region, is now rendezvousing at Chippewa. They will be a valuable auxiliary to Col. Peacock, and will enable him to gather positive information and move intelligently.

Arrangements having been perfected on Friday night last, about 35 members of the Grattan Circle started for the Canadian frontier on Saturday last, under the command of James J. Maloney. They were well supplied with money, but had very small kits. They were accompanied to the North that the holders of State bank bills will be subject to a tax of ten per cent on paying them out. The bank, alone, is liable to that tax, as per act of Congress amending the Internal Revenue law, approved March 3, 1863.
